QUESTION NO.01

The societal norm in Switzerland ~~are~~ is that, a person's status is often judged by their material possessions. For example, people in Switzerland prefer to have posh and expensive cars to show their wealth. Swiss people also like to spend their fortune on expensive clothing. This appetite for branded clothes usually starts in school, when children see their classmates using branded accessories. By observing the current situation, we can predict that, the love of expensive clothes is here to stay but we may see a negative trend in the sales of expensive cars because cars are normally harmful for the environment, and the increase of awareness among people about the issue of global warming may be the primary reason behind it.
